Peddling Perfervidity - Pedestrian Problem

By SID GOULD

Have you been the victim of this typical scene?

You are walking along on one of the many Middlebury College footpaths minding your own business, watching the workmen watching the short skirts, when from behind you hear the unmistakable clicking of gears, or the whir of wheels, or the pumping of pedals. Sometimes you can tell that you have time to turn around and get out of the way, but more often than not, in one frantic, fear-stricken moment you realize that some maniac is bearing down on you at 75 mph plus and is accelerating and that there is absolutely nothing you can do and that in one moment you are about to be run over by a 25 gear, triple seated, 2 ton Schwinn.

Well, you made it this time, but how about the next time? Can you be sure that you won't end up in a puddle on the side of the road?

We of WTI (Walker Training Institute) can assure you that there won't be a next time by teaching you these few simple rules to safe walking. Of course, to be really safe and sure you will have to sign up for the full six week program, but just to demonstrate our techniques we offer this brief outline.

FIRST: ALWAYS BE PREPARED. The safest pedestrian is the one who never leaves his dorm without being adequately primed for the hazards of walking.

Dress: Not only must you wear clothes in contrast with the time of day, but handy signs pasted on your back such as "My father is President of the College", or "I'll see you in court" can be useful in avoiding collisions. You must remember, though, to make your signs large enough to be read from a distance so as to avoid accidents with interested cyclists.

Physical well-being: Make sure your body is in tip top shape before you take it out on the sidewalk. Remember, your body is the only thing between you and a bike in case of collision. Also useful are sharp reflexes. First practice diving to your right or left at the drop of a pin. Then, practice diving without injuring yourself.

SECOND: FOLLOW THESE SIMPLE RULES OF THE SIDEWALK.

STOLEN: 3-speed, green Raleigh 26 inch bicycle. Black seat. Rear tire is flat. Front tire has orange sidewalls. Please contact John Higgins, Box 621, Hepburn 205. No questions asked - I just want it back.

Sex Conference Provides Insights

By CRIS CIOFFI

"Varying Expressions of Sexuality" was the title of a presentation in Mead Chapel on Friday night, October 20. The purpose of the evening was to introduce to the Middlebury community the individuals comprising a panel scheduled to meet for informal discussion on Saturday morning. A part of the Middlebury Student Sex Counseling Service's four-day program called "Focus on Sexuality", the panel proved to be an inordinately interesting group of individuals all with the common interest of providing people with insight and education in the realm of human sexuality.

Fall Sports Have Best Season Ever

Football 8-0, Soccer 9-0-1

'A' and 'B' Field Hockey, 'B' Football Also Emerge Undefeated This Fall

In what has to be considered the most successful fall in Middlebury athletics, five intercollegiate teams combined for a truly stupendous 30-0-3 slate!

Such names as Pope, Cramphin, Barrington, and Mackey have repeatedly dotted sports pages representing John Anderson's football team: Lewis, Charlie and Andy Jackson, Pentkowski, and Evans and Carter paved the way for the soccer team; Pritchard, Kuharich, and Chandler were the individual leaders of the frosh football team; Sue and Nancy Storer, Gary Wheeler, and Lynn Frye anchored the "A" field hockey team to still another near-perfect season; and last but not least, Captain Betsy Baetjer, Abbie Hilmer, and Susie Ebling propelled the "B" hockey squad to the fifth undefeated campaign.

But more than the few individuals named above, such remarkable seasons are truly engineered by comprehensive team efforts, perceptive coaching, and above all, a persistent will to win and an unfaltering pride. Speaking on behalf of the entire Campus staff and surely for the college community, the sports staff salutes athletic director Dick Colman, the coaching staffs and most importantly the athletes for an extraordinary fall.

MIDDLEBURY COLLEGE... Vermont Broadway ?

By JON LONOFF

Middlebury, with little effort, has become what could be called a "thriving theatrical community," with nine productions scheduled for the coming weeks. What can explain the surprising productivity? The classes of '75 and '76 contain a very enterprising group of actors, directors and technical people. In addition to an enthusiastic throng of participants, the increased availability of the Hepburn Zoo, a little theatre, now provides space for many small-scale productions.

The student production of "You're a Good Man, Charlie Brown," and the English-Drama department's production of Strindberg's "A Dream Play" have already passed into posterity and under the scrutiny of The Campus critics. Two more productions have surfaced since, both presented in the Zoo. A few words on them are in order:

"A Program of One-Act Plays" came out of ED 245, Professor Erie Volkert's acting-directing class. The quality of the five one-acters ranged from very good to not-so-hot, but the evening was entertaining (a good time was had by all, etc.) and several actors emerged in fine performances: Lloyd Davis (Pirandello's "A Man with a Flower in his Mouth") and Juris Stuyk (Ionesco's "The Lesson") gave outstanding dramatic performances and Nancy Burns ("Adaptation"; "Chamber 'Music'") proved herself an able, intelligent comedienne.

At the beginning of winter term, Andy Bloch presented his senior thesis, a dramatic adaptation of Gogol's "Diary of a Madman." The hour-long, one-man-show lent a great deal of depth and pathos to the work. Andy created and controlled hysteria that built with intensity. Not flawless, but a powerful experience.

What's on tap in the near future? With the help of Theodore Shank's book, "A Digest of 500 Plays" and those involved in the productions, herewith described are the tentative projects coming up:

John Brown's Body. The history department will be presenting the Stephen Vincent Benet poem in a dramatic reading. The long poem is about the American Civil War, in which the slavery question and abolitionist John Brown's raid on Harper's Ferry serve as an epic theme to portray dramatically many aspects of life in the troubled 1860's. Richard Bayer and Jackie Shepard are being advised by Bruce Catton in this, their senior project. "It's gonna be wonderful," confided director Dick Bayer. "It's mixed media: slides, music, narration, acting vignettes. Bring the kids." Bring them to the Zoo, January 29 - February 1.

Miracles and Everyman. This production is a new interpretation on three medieval morality plays: "Abraham and Isaac", considered the masterpiece among English medieval plays; "Noah and the Flood"; and "Everyman", about a man who searches for a companion in death ad only a character named "Good-Deeds" will go with him.

The new interpretation is described by Professor Erie Volkert, the director: "Taking their cue from the craft guilds and professional performers of "Everyman", the actors will transform themselves into modern circus performers who give their contemporary interpretation of these ancient plays. The set is a constructivist tower of pipes and platforms, designed by Cap Potter, suggesting the complex rigging that is inherent in every performance under a circus big top. The cast is headed by Chris Barron as Everyman, Juris Stuyk and Craig Simmons as Abraham and Isaac, and Joe Ochman as Noah (and, I suspect, as the flood). Faith Gulick supplies the dances and Tim Rowe the music. Abraham and Isaac meet Barnum and Bailey January 30 through February 1, in Wright Theatre.

Endgame is Samuel Beckett's rather enigmatic ode to doom. The final stage in chess, when only a few pieces remain on the board and mate is near, is called 'endgame.' Though there is playfulness in the sometimes farcical action and in the startling juxtaposition of statements, this barely alleviates the mood of futility and inescapable doom: "You cried for the night; it falls: now cry in darkness." This puzzling work will be directed by the equally puzzling John Rathman. The cast of four includes Emily Cushman, David Kester, Patrick Reagen and John Whittaker. It will be presented in the Zoo on February 15.

The Bacchae. This Euripedes classic is filled with frenzied Bacchic revelry led by a vengeful Dionysus. The work poetically careers from voyeurism to orgy to murder to insanity. This weird and awesome play creates a mood of mysterious excitement and exhilaration and contains some of Euripedes' finest poetry. God-knows-what the classic will become at the hands of student director Newton Lewis, but we'll find out February 22 in Wright Theatre.

The Time of Your Life is an all-star production of what one cynic has called "William Saroyan's valentine to humanity." Senior Ted Morgan, who is directing the student production, talked about the play: "Set in 1939, between the depression and the war, the play presents an optimistic and sentimental view of Americal life. Ordinary people inhabit a San Francisco bar and through their words and actions life becomes good, love can flourish, and evil has no place. It is a whimsical comedy with a concern for ordinary people and the simple values of life." The Pulitzer Prize winning play plays from March 15 to 17.

Patience. The music department will be staging this Gilbert and Sullivan operetta. Senior Tim Rowe had this to say about it: " "Patience" hilariously satirizes the excesses of the Victorian aesthetic revolt, centering around two poets who are relentlessly besieged by a faddish pack of recently converted society matrons who fancy themselves 'aesthetic.' " The production, the proceeds of which will go into the music scholarship fund, reveals a curiously up-to-date theme and includes a cast of 30 and a 26 piece orchestra. John MacDonald and Tim Rowe are directing. The leads include Loring Starr as Patience, the simple milkmaid; Meredith Parsons as the ample Lady Jane, Leader of the Matron Pack; Steven Avey as Archibald Grosvenor, an Idyllic poet; and Tim Pehta as Reginald Bunthorne, the cynical fleshy poet." Performances are scheduled to begin April 19.

L'Avare (the Miser). The French department's Simon Barenbaum will direct this Moliere comedy following the success of the delightful "Tartuffe" which was presented last spring. Assistant director Charles Callanan described the plot: "It deals with Harpagon, a widower, who allows his miserliness to rule his every action which frustrates his children and makes him dupe to those who recognize his all-consuming foible. When asked to choose between love or money, he takes money and with it, loneliness." It goes on in the Zoo, April 26-28.

Volpone or The Fox. Ben Jonson asks the musical question, "Can moral decadence be funny?" From Volpone's opening lines, "Good morning to the world and next my gold," to the final speech of a Venetian magistrate, "Let all that see these vices thus rewarded, take heart," the play moves against a background of greed. The sordid underside of Renaissance man's lust for life is revealed as Volpone, with the help of his servant Mosca, feigns mortal sickness and so tricks several rich men into pledging him their wealth in the hopes of inheriting Volpone's estate and fortune. Bart Teush is directing. The exciting production will run from May 3 to May 6 in Wright Theatre.

A Program of One-Acts. Once again, Erie Volkert's spring term acting and directing class will present a series of scenes and one-acts. To give you some idea of what the performance will be like, this is the concept of the course: A seminar in which a Greek Tragedy, a Shakespearean Tragedy, a Shakespearean Comedy, a comedy of manners and a melodrama will be studied in relation to acting and directing problems. Final projects, in which each student will take part either as director or actor, will be presented in the Zoo, May 10-12.

These are only the productions I've gotten 'official' wind of. Rumors circulate that other plays, including a musical version of "Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf" (aptly titled, "Woolf"), may descend upon unsuspecting Middlebury audiences. The Zoo, in any event, is now organized to mount, fund and house any theatricality a troupe might like to present. You are encouraged to see Mary Sawyer or any member of the Theatre Workshop, a group of students interested in getting everyone who wants to involved in the theatre at Middlebury.
